APPOINTMENTS FOR NEXT YEAR ANNOUNCED MONDAY MORNING

Field Officers and Non-Coms. for 1929-30 Session Made Public

Every year at this time sees the end of much speculation which has been rife for months past, and brings with it probably many disappointments and perhaps as many surprises. The appointment of field officers as well as the appointment of sergeants and corporals for the session of 1929-1930 was read in chapel on Monday morning and thus put to rest the many speculations which have been made as to who should "rate" during the coming year.

The commissioned officers are always chosen from the Senior Class, the sergeants from the Junior class, while the corporals are selected from the Sophomore class. These men are chosen because of their ability, qualities of leadership, scholastic standings, and upon the recommendations of the Senior officers with the approval of the President of the College and the Commandant. The remainder of the commissioned officers will be chosen from the future Senior class at the end of camp this summer, where they will have an opportunity to further display their good qualities.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY NEXT YEAR'S JUNIORS

F. H. Crymes of Greenwood to Be at Helm of Class of '31

The rising Junior class elected its class officers for the coming year on Wednesday, May 22. The men elected were: F. H. Crymes, of Greenwood, president; W. A. Cohn, Chester, vice-president; L. D. Swearingen, Trenton, secretary and treasurer; and N. E. Watson, Greenwood, as historian.

Frank Crymes served his class this present year most commendably as Historian, and a better and more competent man for the leader of the Junior Class would have been very hard indeed to find.

Buster Cohn, L. D. Swearingen, and Nat Watson are all popular men with plenty of ability to be leaders of the class. Nat was the able president of the Sophomore class this year, and Buster and L. D. figured prominently in athletic and scholastic affairs.

These men are especially fitted for their positions, and the class, under their leadership, is looking forward to a most successful year.

RIFLE TEAM AWARDED MEDALS IN CHAPEL

Ten Men Presented Medals by Col. Munson for High Places on Team

On last Thursday in chapel Col. Munson presented ten men of the rifle team with medals for having the highest average scores for the past season. The first five high men received silver medals, and the second five men received bronze medals. The five who received silver medals were: Clyburn, Hughes, Watson, Dashiels, and Prim. The five receiving bronze medals were Dorset, Rose, Callahan, Webb, and Lee.

The success of the team during the past year was very good considering the unusually late start. It was only after much searching and investigation that a suitable range was found and even then considerable work was required to put the place in shape for firing. The men on the team had to do this work before they could fire a shot, and much credit is due to them and to Captain Johnson who had charge of the team during the past season. Captain Johnson worked as hard as any one to get the range in shape.

The range was built under number three barracks, but a great quantity of plunder had to be moved as well as earth. A back stop had to be built, and suitable lights obtained and installed. This is the first season Clemson has had the use of an indoor range. Although one has been sadly needed for many years, and it is well that she did for the past season has been entirely too wet for firing out of doors.

The team is making plans for a bigger and better range since a range will be available at the very start of the season. The team is also making plans to the National Rifle Association next season, a thing which will be a distinctive advantage in many ways. The team loses a valuable man in Clyburn but the improvement of the other members is a certainty with every passing season and many victories are expected to be chalked up next season.

LESTER TO CAPTAIN 1930 TRACK TEAM

Georgia Boy to Head Men of Cinder Path—J. A. Wilson is Chosen Manager

The track team at a meeting last week elected Lester, star in the weight events to the captaincy of the 1930 edition of the Tiger track team. The manager, J. A. Wilson, was elected at the same time. These men will succeed Blakeney and Burdette as captain and manager respectively. Lester and Wilson will have to go some to better the record of this year's team but we believe that they will do it. Here's looking forward to the third successive state track championship for the Tigers and an impressive record in the Southern Conference Meet.

THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES ARE CONCLUDED TODAY

COMMENCEMENT DANCES BEST YET

Ted Williamson and His Brunswick Recording Orchestra Furnish Music for All Three Dances

The last three dances of the year might be called the best three. There were no cares to mar the occasion as everyone had finished examinations and were ready to leave for "Home Sweet Home". The dance Friday night and the one Saturday night were both good. But that last dance, Monday night, June 3rd, was the best of the three.

The South's most beautiful girls were assembled at Clemson for these dances. The god of peace and contentment was certainly present to be in charge. Cupid was also in one corner. There were many present who were attending their last dance at Clemson, but the casual visitor could not have noticed it, as everyone was happy.

The Music was furnished by Ted Williamson and his orchestra. They were plenty good and they kept the hop going until three o'clock. No one was tired as good music keeps one's mind off such trivial things.

The decorations were beautiful. The scheme carried out was with alternate green and white streamers floating away from a rosette in the center. The walls were decorated with alternate green and white streamers hung from the roof. The Gym was a dreamland paradise to the couples.

DRAMATIC CLUB PLAYS TO LARGE AUDIENCE

Play in Chapel Monday Night is Big Success

The second presentation of "The Ghost Bird" was given Monday night in the college auditorium and was a decided success. The play, a mystery play of four acts, was presented by the Dramatics Club. The basis of the plot was murder and the discovery of the murderer. Since nearly all the characters had motives and opportunities for committing the murder, the solution remained a mystery until the final act. The plot was well constructed and kept the audience in a pleasant state of mind. In the finale the only unsuspected person proved to be the "Vulture", and the lovers were happily united. There were many touches of comedy all during the play, in pleasing contrast to the theme of the play. The play was given without a single fault and the stage lighting was of the best, the lightning and thunder produced thus was very realistic.

"Little Slam" Mathis, who played the part of the comic butler and detective, did exceptionally well. Mrs. Bleckley, the directress, played the part of the pretty but talkative maid, while Cecil King played the part of the quiet, gentlemanly young man who turned out to be the "Vulture" and did some fine acting. Large Number of Visitors and Alumni Here for Finals—Po- teat is Commencement Speaker—Large Number of Graduates.

With the awarding of the diplomas to 196 members of the Class of 1929, the commencement exercises of the thirty-third graduating class were concluded today. The commencement speaker was Dr. W. L. Poteat, President Emeritus, of Wake Forest College.

The exercises began last Sunday morning with the Baccalaureate sermon, which was delivered by Dr. W. A. Lambeth of Washington, D. C. Sunday afternoon there was an informal meeting of the Seniors, their guests and members of the faculty in front of the Y. M. C. A. building. The Clemson College Concert Band under the direction of Professor E. J. Freeman, gave a concert at the same time.

At 8:15 P. M. Sunday night in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, the closing exercises of the Young Men's Christian Association were held.

Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the annual meeting of the Alumni Association was held in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium.

The closing exercises of the literary societies were held at 11:00 Monday morning in the college chapel. Following the speeches, the Chronicle Medal for the best short story and the society diplomas and medals were awarded. Immediately after this, the athletic honors were awarded. The Concert Band furnished music for the exercises.

Monday afternoon at 4:00, the military exercises were held on Bowman Field. These exercises consisted of a review, a parade, competitive drill for the R. W. Simpson medal for the best drilled Junior, Sophomore, or Freshman. This medal was awarded to F. B. Farr. Then followed the presentation of the commissions in the Reserve Corps of the U. S. Army to the Seniors.

This morning, the dreams of years were realized when the 196 members of the graduating class received their diplomas. Dr. W. L. Poteat delivered the address. The class was then presented to the President of the Board of Trustees. The diplomas were then awarded. Following the delivery of the diplomas, Dr. Sikes presented the various medals and honors. The singing of the Alma Mater was followed by the benediction, and "Taps" by the Cadet Band.

maid was quite good with her French and her gangland dialects. Miss "Tootsie" Mills made a charming and acceptable heroine, and "Whit" Whitten played well opposite her as a young lawyer. Fred Rush did well in his portrayal of the brusque, rough, loud-talking detective. Jodie Hawkins as the heroine's brother, and "Pinda" Major as Mrs. Dore characterized parts exceptionally well. "Jule" Robertson and "Pee Wee" Partridge took parts as village flappers and depicted them well indeed. Numerous (Continued on page 4)

TO THE SENIORS

"When the Great Scorer comes, he'll not count your merits won or lost—but the way you played the game."

The year is over, and now that we are at its end we may ask: What have I accomplished? There are perhaps nearly twelve hundred different answers to this question, but would that each one of us might look at this line with contentment. "Life's joys lie not in fame or gold; but, whether low or high the grade, it's in the loyal friends you've made." Then friends of the senior class—athletes, scholars, and others as you may be classified—we take this opportunity to bid you a fond farewell. "A word that has been and must be, yet is forever—Fare thee well!"

"COMMENCEMENT"

The name seems a strange misnomer, coming as it does at the end of the session instead of at its beginning. Of course when first applied it was entirely appropriate, but it has lost its significance because of changed customs. And yet, surely a "commencement" it should still remain,—a commencement of something really worth while. The truth is that the end of everything, as long as life lasts, is the commencement of something else.

But of this "commencement" so near at hand, what shall be said? That is should be a commencement indeed as well as in name is clear for a number of reasons. Not one of us here who does not owe a debt of tremendous character to the whole of society for the advantages which have been ours during our entire school career. Not many of us have enjoyed these advantages except at the price of sacrifice on the part of fathers and mothers. All of us are indebted to our separate communities for the money put by these communities into the physical equipment and into teachers salaries in our grammar and high schools. The State has made large investment here to the end that we might have all the opportunities Clemson offers to its student body. Our parents, our communities, and the state all have the right to expect that there shall be some adequate and appropriate return for all the money and thought they have spent on us. No worse condemnation could overtake us than for us to repudiate these obligations of ours.

For those of us who are leaving finally these barracks and this campus the closing ceremonies of this last session should usher in the beginning of a program of service rendered to the end that our obligation to society may be discharged at least in some measure.

It is not preaching to say this. It is simply the recognition of a challenge so obvious, so clear, that none of us should miss its appeal. If we are not worth more to our homes, to our separate communities, and to the commonwealth because of what has been done for us during our school years then all the money poured out on us without stint has been worse than wasted. We should be worth more in dollars and cents. The wealth producing agencies of the state should be multiplied and made more effective by the men who have now come to the end of their college careers. But that is not all by any means. A state rich in physical resources and poor in manhood is on its way to the scrap heap of worn out things. The college graduate should be a leader showing the way to more prosperous living, but doubly important is it that in all matters civic and moral he should contribute to the steady uplift of society. Nothing could be finer than for us all to go forth at the end of this session determined to make this the commencement of a life definitely committed to the betterment of conditions under which all our people live.

MUSEUM IN LIBRARY MUCH NEEDED ADDITION

An Historic Sketch of Clemson's
First Colors—Museum Needed to Preserve Relics of Former Days at Clemson.

A tall square case in a corner of the Library building holds a silk flag which is slowly falling to pieces. Probably few students have seen the case, and fewer know the history of the colors.

In 1893 the Clemson cadet corps was composed of one battalion of four companies, A, B, C, and D. Captain F. E. Taylor commanded A Company, Captain O. M. Pegues, who was in charge of B Company is now a successful farmer and a member of the House of Representatives from Marlboro county. Commanding C Company was Rudolph E. Lee, now, professor of Architecture at Clemson, and Carter C. Newman, professor of Horticulture, was then in command of D Company.

The cadets wore a fatigue uniform of grey jeans or homespun, with blouse, trousers and cap of identical material. A tin "C. A. C." answered for a cap ornament. For dress the cadets of the nineties wore a cadet grey uniform, with a tight fitting, cutaway tail coat, muchly braided and buttoned. Bell-bottomed trousers were even then the regulation style. Commissioned officers wore red sashes and plumes, while non-coms and privates were content with pompoms to decorate their caps. Lieutenant T. Q. Donaldson, of the Seventh Calvary, was commandant at that time, being succeeded by Captain Ezra B. Fuller in 1895.

During the latter part of the 1893 session, announcement was made that a national flag would be presented to the company which should win a competitive drill to be held on December first. The drill took place on the ground which is now in front of barracks number two. C Company, under Captain Lee, won the drill. Other percentages were B Company 95; A Company 93; D Company 90.

A few days after the drill, President Craighead presented the flag to Captain Lee at chapel exercises. It was a handsome silk color, of regulation size. It contained but forty-four stars; Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Utah had not been admitted to the United States. After presentation to Captain Lee, the flag became the battalion color and was so used for some ten years. The first color sergeant to carry it was Robert I. Woodside, now president of the Woodside National Bank in Greenville. C. M. Furman, father of H. J. Furman, of the class of 1931, was first lieutenant of the winning company. C. P. Langley, now of Greensboro, was second lieutenant. W. W. Klugh, now head of the Engineering drawing division, J. E. Hunter, of the Mathematics division, and B. F. Robertson, head of Fertilizer Analysis division were members of the company. Captain Lee was later made senior captain, commanding A company, the highest office in the corps.

The flag became badly worn in service. At one time when it was torn, Mrs. Lee repaired it, using a portion of her wedding dress. Finally it was retired, and now hangs in its case in the Library, exposed to the ravages of moths and the atmosphere. Some college authority might well see that it is placed in an hermetically sealed case so that it might be preserved to posterity. The first flag carried by the corps is an emblem which should be revered. Clemson has been slow to preserve the relics of the early days of the college, and it is to be hoped that some definite move will be made in this direction. A collection of all the uniforms which have been designed as regulation at various times would be most interesting and valuable. It is no doubt possible to secure these now, but within a few years they will probably have been lost or destroyed. The gallery of the Library is ideal for a college museum (and nothing would be more interesting to the students, alumni, and visitors.

The Sophomore council, which has been doing a great deal of helpful work this year under the guiding hand of Roy Cooper, held a meeting a few days ago and decided to show a little appreciation to Mr. Cooper by presenting to him a loving cup.

The following is a copy of the inscription as it appeared on the cup:

 SOPHOMORE COUNCIL

OFFICERS FOR JUNIOR COUNCIL ARE ELECTED

The last meeting for this year of the Sophomore council was held in the Ladies room of the "Y" Tuesday evening, May 28. The purpose of the meeting was to decide whether or not the boys desired to continue their meetings next year under the name of the Junior council.

As it was unanimously decided to continued as a Junior council, the boys immediately began thinking over whom they wanted for their next year's officers. At the close of the ballot the following men received offices:

C. E. Crutchfield, President; H. M. McLaurin, Vice-President; R. F. McGee, Secretary.

As soon as the President had been elected, the motion was made that he be given the priveledge of choosing a committee to decide who was to be admitted as new members. As a result of this motion, the committee was appointed and eleven more men were selected to become members of the group for next year.

ON TO BLUE RIDGE

Just recently the Y. M. C. A. purchased a new Ford truck which they are going to use to take a load of boys who are interested in "Y" work on a trip up North and back down to Blue Ridge, N. C. The truck is to leave here on June 4 and get to the "land of the sky" on the 14.

Some of the cities which the secretaries are planning on visiting are Raleigh, Richmond, Fredericksburg, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, Asheville, and Blue Ridge.

The purpose of this trip is to allow the boys to see how other Y's are functioning and how they are carrying on their work. The boys are going to sleep in the Y. M. C. A.'s which they visit and are going to cook a number of their meals themselves.

We want University Men for our summer classes in flying !

Individual instruction in flying is offered to selected applicants by the Buffalo Summer unit of the National Flying Schools—May to November.

Complete courses of instruction qualifying the student for various government commercial pilots' licenses are now open for your selection.

The equipment of this school comes second only to the Army and Navy schools in reliability and completeness. The training plane used is manufactured by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, who have been exclusive primary plane manufacturers for the United States Army Air Corps, and for four foreign governments for a number of years.

Our instructors have been carefully selected from the Army Air Corps, and their classes are being limited to insure thoroughly individualized instruction.

Parents whose sons or daughters are contemplating courses in flying this summer are invited to write us for details regarding our schools. It is our belief that many of the future executives of this new giant industry will be largely selected from our various school units of which Buffalo is the first. Where possible, we suggest a personal visit to our office or the Consolidated Airport, Military Rd., Buffalo.

Full details of the subjects taught, terms, etc., will be furnished upon application. Write, phone, wire or call in person.

When certain football teams on the 1927 schedule did not appear on the 1928 schedule charges were made by these institutions that Clemson officials were getting "High Hat". Clemson has consistently met all state teams in all sports on a "home and home" basis in every sport except football since this charge was made.

The 1929 basketball schedule carried home and home games with every state team. This was done in baseball.

The 1929 baseball schedule in the state consisted of fourteen baseball games—two with every state team on a home and home basis. The game with Erskine on March 30, at Clemson was rained out. This game was rescheduled in a week when Clemson was playing four other baseball games. No objection to this by any state team or by Carolina. The game with Wofford, who held a 2-1 decision over Clemson already, was rained out on April 25. The game was rescheduled the 29th of April and played. No objection to this from Carolina still. The game with Citadel on May 6 was rained out. Clemson was playing scheduled games on the 7, 8, 9, 10 and May 11 was the first date that these two teams could possibly meet and play this contest. That this contest was a double-header seems to be the objection. By playing this contest Clemson was entirely consistent. The writer can cite many college double-headers, some of which were played this season. Therefore no new precedent has been set; but, a consistent policy has been consummated. Carolina had the same opportunity to schedule fourteen state games as did Clemson, but what did they do? The Rooster that sets such store by sportsmanship etc., etc., scheduled only nine games of baseball in the state. Six of these games were played in their own ball-yard, two were played on opponents' grounds and one in neutral territory. One team, which has as good record as another team which holds a decision over Carolina in their only baseball contest, was not even played at all and yet this team is the closest to the prizes of the university.

Upon what basis must a championship be decided? On the basis of wins over other teams. Carolina holds two wins over Clemson, for which Clemson offers no alibi. On the other hand Erskine, a team that Clemson met and defeated twice, won its only game with Carolina in the Rooster's own ball-yard. Clemson won two games from Newberry and Carolina never even played them. Fancy what Carolina's line-up of seven left-hand hitters would have done against Newberry's three capable left-hand pitchers. It would appear that Carolina also has a master mind but it did not function quite as well as did Director Gee's altho the latter's policy was consistent throughout. May we pause to say that if this controversy is to be placed on a personal basis it will likely prove embarrassing to others than the Tiger. Clemson has nothing but appreciation for what "Mutt" Gee has done since he came back to the campus to head Tiger athletics. His athletic record for performance and sportsmanship compares most favorably with others in his position.

If the basis for deciding a championship is to be what it always has been—a percentage basis—then Clemson has played fourteen games. Six of these games were played at Clemson, EIGHT were played on opponents' grounds. A champion is supposed to meet all challengers. Carolina, have you done this as Clemson did? Have you met the opponents in their own ball-yards as Clemson has done? Clemson played almost as many games on opponents grounds as Carolina played on its entire state schedule. Clemson, after losing the first two games on its state schedule came back and won eleven out of the last twelve games played. This displays the Tiger fighting spirit. All praise to the Tiger baseball team.

Clemson does not wish to be brought into such a controversy. When Rooster enthusiasts put forth premature claims to the baseball championship and support their contentions by engaging in personal and unfounded statements the Tiger snarls and stands ready and waiting to defend himself and his honestly won laurels.

My advice to Carolina is to quit looking to God and rain for championships and they might win one—m-a-y-b-e?????

FINN CHOSEN CAPTAIN
CROSS COUNTRY TEAMSumter Boy to Lead Globe
Trotters Next Year

The Cross-country team last week selected P. S. Finn of Sumter as captain for the 1930 season. Finn has been one of the main stays on the team for the past two years, and great things are expected of him next year.

The cross-country team this past season was regarded as a strong outfit by every opponent. While their record is not very impressive, there are many other things to be taken into consideration. Meets for next year have already been scheduled with many strong conference opponents, and the boys are going to be out for blood. The team next year will lose only the services of Andrews, this year's captain. Andrews was a valuable man, but the other men are sure to improve with each season, and so it is almost a certainty that the team next year will be feared by all with whom they compete. There will be good reason for this too for we are confident that they will win the larger number of their meets.

Every Tiger wishes you and your team success, Finn, in every battle in which you engage next season.

"So you call your canary Joe? Does it stand for Joseph or Josephine?"

We don't know. That's why we call it Joe.

I see there's a new book out on What Every Young Girl Should Know, and it cost only fifty cents.

It's a waste of money, with all the boys so anxious to give lessons for nothing.

Is Peggy in the Social Register now?

Oh, yes! She promoted two prize fights and passed the blindfold cigarette test.

Gentlemen:

Replying to your circular letter of June 29, be informed that your sample packages were received. With them I received the pamphlet describing your product, which I was able to enjoy reading because there was not in the circular matter the usual distasteful sales talk which makes the recipient of a sample package feel obligated or uncomfortable.

I believe your practice of giving your prospect a sample and then letting him make up his own mind will gain you many more customers than will the usual modern sales practice of pushing the product down the prospect's throat. As a matter of fact, since receiving your sample and your advertising matter I smoked up the sample package and have since purchased a number of cans from neighborhood dealers, all of whom carry this tobacco in a city of this size.

I have found Edgeworth to be a satisfactory blend at a very reasonable price, and although my past acquaintance is brief, I look forward to a long membership in the Edgeworth Club.

Yours very truly,

vocal selections were rendered by Fred Ducker, Bill Hodge and Oliver Lupo. It is quite sure that all the visitors and Campus folk enjoyed the play and the Dramatics Club is to be congratulated on the fine performance.

Dealer—Somebody stole three sets of harness out of my store.

Policeman—Did the thief leave any traces?

Dealer—No, he took the traces, too.
